Chicago, Feb. 6.—A special to the Times from Cincinnati makes the following reference to the progress of the woman's praying and temperance movement: J. C. Vanpelt, Ohio's Wickedest Man, delivered a rousing temperance lecture last evening at New Vienna. His audience was immense, and the most intense enthusiasm prevailed during his remarks. He apologized for his former hostility manifested toward the agitators, and stated that his soul had been softened by their prayers and all his purposes changed by their long sufferings. He confessed to having frequently taken the last dime from some poor wretch to pay for whisky—a dime which he knew had been earned by his starving wife or child. He was determined to abandon the business and come in on the Lord's side. His remarks were frequently interrupted by prolonged applause, and at the conclusion the audience presented him with a purse of $150.

WASHINGTON LADIES

The sensation of the season is Mrs. Fish's daughter Edith, and I have no patience with the man or woman who does not at once and irrevocably fall in love with her. She is simply superb, and she isn't so very handsome either. It would be perfectly useless to attempt to describe her—I should as soon think of drawing one of Murillo's Madonnas, so I will go right on to tell you of the last Wednesday morning at their house and elsewhere.

When you get inside Mrs. Belknap's d[illegible] you involuntarily listen a little and are relieved at the sound of good plain English [illegible] you are none the less dazzled in this drawing room, but [illegible] your eyes and not your ears that get confused. Mrs. Belknap is one of the few ladies in society here who can afford to have pretty [illegible] around her, and [illegible] enough to say that, after a perplexing series of [illegible] you think her face the finest [illegible] of them all. [illegible] ever even a [illegible] could tell how incomparable her toilets are [illegible] and Miss Fish was the sensation of the season [illegible] this bride who holds that place, as Mrs. B. were she kept the house of her brother-in-law and did the honors till all Washington was at her [illegible] last year she was abroad, and now she comes back again a bride to her new home—very elegant in all its appointments, but evidently no less a home. Her parlors are crowded, and everybody is at the height of enjoyment, but if you watch her [illegible] you cannot see but she is just as gracious to those very common looking people who are apparently strangers to society [illegible] as she is to Sir Edward Thornton, who [illegible] or to the consequential [illegible] of ex-Secretary and Mrs. Borie, who are [illegible] them.—*Cor. It is supposed he exacted the pledge on the strength of his experience in a similar suit previously [illegible]. At all events it showed he had an eye to business. Judge Dwinelle reserved his decision as to the force and construction of the extraordinary document.

A ROGUE'S LECTURE

THE CLIMAX OF IMPUDENCE—"LORD MASSEY'S" EXPERIENCE AT CAPE MAY.

[From the Philadelphia Press.]

Lord Massey, the rogue of the period, has really taken to lecturing. On Wednesday evening he gave a lengthy account of his life in the Horticultural Hall of Westchester. The local paper gives a verbatim report of what he said, from which we make the following extract relative to his exploits at Cape May last summer:

The idea struck me that I would migrate to Cape May for a week, and with that intent I took passage from Philadelphia in the good ship Ironsides. Before I had been long on board a young Baltimorean introduced himself to me and began, as you Americans say, blowing. I informed him I was a greenhorn (save the mark!); he blew harder. I told him I was an English tourist (harder). I stopped for a bit; he blew himself clear out. However, I could stand that, as he was standing chammy all the time. I like chammy, and friends here may take that as a hint should I meet them abroad. In good time we arrived at the wharf. Of course, it would have been degrading for two such swells as us to travel in a common omnibus, so the best carriage procurable was ordered and obtained. Arriving at Congress Hall we went to the desk on which was lying the visitor's book. He entered his name first as Captain ——. I must beat that. Like a flash the thought came to my mind, and like a flash it was executed—Lord Massey was written. The visitors went to look at the list of arrivals. "Stand back" was the word; a real live lord is in our presence; gaze at him reverentially; make way for him in his promenade; bow to him when he passes, and in every other way possible show that you are idle worshippers. I had not long been there before the proprietor came up and welcomed me, telling me that I did both his establishment and Cape May an honor by my visit. Suppers were proposed and gotten up to welcome me; balls, dinners, everything that could be done, was done to honor me. It was "my Lord" here and "my Lord" there, and invitations to dine, sup and lunch poured in. A magnificent team for $2,000 was next morning purchased as to go a foot for his lordship would be infra dig. The belle of the island smiled her sweetest and left to solitude her admirer from Philadelphia. A town house in the city of Penn paled in attractions beside those of a coronet. So it continued for six days, when the bubble burst by my foolishly telling them that I had a yacht at the breakwater in which I had come over, and with which I had beaten the Pennsylvania in my passage across. Col. Cake, the proprietor of the hotel, and in my mind the only sensible man on the island, began to doubt his lordship and telegraphed to the breakwater to know if the yacht was there. The answer came, "No such yacht has ever entered the Delaware." The bubble was burst, my Lord dethroned, and was but a commoner again; but I must say that I do not believe that any other people in the world would have taken the sell so good naturedly as did the American people at Cape May. Instead of being very angry, everyone laughed and were willing to do everything they could to help me out of a scrape should I get into one through it. The general impression is that I obtained a great deal of money from the Cape May folks. It is an erroneous one; the only money that I borrowed was a sufficiency to pay my passage to Philadelphia.

HOW CRANE CAME TO GRIEF

He occupied delightful quarters in a genteel boarding house not more than a million of miles from the corner of Wabash avenue and Eldridge court. The old dweller in Chicago, knowing perfectly the general character of its different thoroughfares, may doubt that there is such a thing as a boarding house anywhere in the neighborhood, but he was exceptionally good looking and decidedly dapper, and perhaps was taken in for the sake of his company—so it's not material about the boarding house theory.

He patronized the barber and the boot black with great regularity, and ordered from his tailor quite as often as he paid his bills. He was a pretty man, very pretty, with a profusion of curl, plenty of perfume, and a very winning way. He was lavish [illegible]—that is of his company—and he parted with it readily to ladies.

He shone as a beau, and women doted upon him. It is even thought that they sometimes tore each other's hair, but in lively controversies concerning him. He was so nice, so distingue, so to sum up with that feminine climax, so perfectly splendid.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 30.—In the Senate Chandler presented a petition for the extension of the money-order system to every postoffice in the United States and the reduction of the charge in such office. Referred.

Harlan presented a memorial from the Governor of the District of Columbia in response to statements in a memorial presented a few days ago, [illegible] The Governor says the District officials have [illegible] and [illegible] the fullest investigation [illegible] District.

The report of the committee of the House appointed last session sustains the District government and the liberal appropriations made by Congress last year. It encourages the authorities of the District to go forward with improvements, and says their course has been sustained at every election in the District. In view of all the circumstances, the Governor thinks it will not be fair or just to enter upon another investigation unless there is some show of proof of the charges made by pretended taxpayers in the memorial presented by them.

After debate it was ordered that the memorial lie on the table.

A large number of bills were introduced in the morning hour, among them one authorizing the President to appoint a board of five officers to investigate the charges against Gen. Howard, which was laid over informally.

At 1 o'clock Carpenter resumed the floor on Louisiana affairs. He said he did not condemn the action of the President in any of these Louisiana proceedings, because he merely ordered that process of the Federal Courts be executed. He had no other guide than Durrell's order, and could do nothing but order its execution. He therefore laid no stress on any action of the President or Marshal Packard. They were not to blame. The responsibility rested upon Durrell. He argued that the telegram of Attorney General Williams to Packard directing the enforcement of that order was in no sense a recognition of the Kellogg Government, and he scouted the idea that the President could without the facts before him recognize any particular person as Governor or any certain body of men as the Legislature of any State. He argued that there was really no legal government in existence in Louisiana, fraud having been committed by both parties, and he contended that the Constitution vested power in Congress to order a new election under the clause which guarantees to every state a republican form of government, and in conclusion he gave notice that he would on Monday next introduce a bill for a new election in Louisiana.

At the conclusion of Carpenter's speech Morton took the floor and began a reply. He declared the movement for a new election came from men who had incited and participated in the murder of thousands of negroes in Louisiana and who were responsible for riots and bloodshed in New Orleans, naming in this connection McEnery and Warmoth, both of whom were on the floor of the Senate. He declared it was his belief that the Kellogg Government was in sympathy with a large majority of the people of the State, and he said the entire Republican party of Louisiana were opposed to a new election. Morton finally gave way for a motion to go into Executive session, but will resume his speech on Monday, to which time the Senate adjourned.

Sargent, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported the Naval Appropriation bill with an amendment. Placed on the calendar.

HOUSE.

Washington, Jan. 30.—In the House, under call of the committees for such business, a number of private bills were reported and referred.

Coburn, from the Military Committee, reported a resolution requesting the President to appoint a military court to consist of five officers to investigate the charges against Gen. O. O. Howard and report their opinion as well on the moral as the legal responsibility for such offenses, if any be discovered.

Frye asked leave to offer an amendment giving the accused right of challenge now allowed by law in trial by court martial.

Coburn declined to admit the amendment, he offered remarking that there was no place for challenges to come in, as the court would be appointed by the President. He moved the previous question.

The House refused to second it by a vote of 74 to 100, and the amendment was received and the discussion proceeded.

Coburn denied that the amendment was a reflection on the President, and said all the members of the Committee who reported the resolution were friendly to Gen. Howard, and he (Howard) said the resolution suited and ought to pass without objection.

Butler (Mass.) said he did not regard the amendment any more than a challenge of a grand juror was an imputation against the Marshal who summoned the jury.

After further debate, in which a personal controversy arose between Wood and G. F. Hoar in regard to a former investigation of General Howard, in which Wood accused Hoar of being the attorney of Howard and a petty trickster, and for which expression he was called to order by the Speaker, the amendment was agreed to—172 to 44—and the joint resolution passed.

The House then proceeded to the consideration of private bills and disposed of a number.

Cox offered a joint resolution giving the thanks of Congress to the officers and crew of the steamship Atlantic for saving the crew of the brigantine Scotland in mid ocean.

The House then adjourned. To-morrow's session is to be for debate only.

From the report as published in the Courier, it appears that the cost of a narrow gauge for the 14.83 miles, running from Tenino to Main street wharf, Olympia, would be $162,20[illegible].91, of a broad gauge same distance $210,[illegible].42; difference of cost in favor of narrow gauge $[illegible]. A table had been prepared, and one after another laid down the precious offerings until it fairly groaned under the accumulated weight of glittering and costly gifts. Among the guests were many of the fair sex distinguished for their beauty and grace, and their elegant costumes created a buzz of admiration wherever they went. The gentlemen, as is the custom with us Americans, were for the most part clad in sombre black, relieved in some cases by delicate tinted ties and white waistcoats.

A CELESTIAL MONARCH

The following is the Chinese account of the late interview between the Emperor of China and the foreign envoys at Pekin:

Since his Majesty's assumption of power, rain and sunshine have succeeded each other in due season and the public mind has been tranquilly at rest. As regards the audience of the foreign envoys, what they wanted at first was to be carried in sedan chairs within the great gate of the palace (Tai ho Men) and to enter the reception hall wearing their swords. They demanded that the Emperor should descend from his throne and with his own hands receive their letters of credence; but upon this the Grand Secretary Wen Hsiang smashing his tea cup into fragments sternly opposed the idea, and thus it came to be agreed that the audience should take place at the Tsz-kwang Ko on the 6th day of the 6th month. The ceremonies were rehearsed on the preceding day at the Tsung li Yamen. This was done in an informal way, amid chatting and laughter, and no particular attention was paid to the matter. On the day itself the entire brigade of Guards was on duty at the west gate in bright array and with drawn sword. The French, American, British, Russian, Prussian and Austrian representatives—in all twelve persons from six different countries—were all permitted to wear their swords, and were introduced by heads of departments from the Tsung li Yamen within the gateway of the [illegible]. As they passed each entrance in succession the gate was locked. On reaching the foot of the dais, the high functionaries of the Tsung li Yamen led them up the steps. His Majesty having ascended the throne, the envoys were led to the space at its foot, when they performed the ceremony of inclining the body. They did not kneel. By the side of the steps there was placed a yellow table, and the envoys stood in rank to read out their credentials, the British having the leading place. When he had read a few sentences he began to tremble from head to foot, and was incapable of completing the perusal. The Emperor asked, Is the Prince of your country well? but he could utter no reply. The Emperor again asked, You have besought permission to see me time and time again, what is it you have to say? but again he was unable to make an answer. The next proceeding was to hand in the credentials, but in doing this he fell down on the ground time after time, and not a syllable could he articulate. Upon this Prince Kung laughed loud at him before the entire court, exclaiming, "Chicken feather!" and gave orders to have him assisted down the steps. He was unable to move of his own accord and sat down on the floor perspiring and panting for breath. The whole twelve shook their heads and whispered together no one knows what. When the time came for the assembly at the banquet they still remained incapable, and dispersed in hurried confusion. Prince Kung said to them, "You would not believe that it is no light matter to come face to face with his Majesty, but what have you got to say about it now?" This is what we Chinese call chicken feather, and it will be a joke for the whole empire. He publishes a letter in which he says: "I am not a candidate for Congress nor any other position. I would not accept a nomination unless it were tendered as a voluntary act of the Convention, fairly and openly expressed as the will and wish of the Democratic party." Now, what does that mean?

Mr. J. M. Brown, postmaster at Silverton, informs the Statesman that circumstances do not bear out the report made by Mr. R. C. [illegible] that there was more probability that Greathouse, the miller, had absconded, but the general impression in that place still is that he has been murdered, and this belief prompted a general renewal of the search for the missing man, to be continued through Friday and Saturday of the present week. The fact that no information has yet been received of his being seen elsewhere gives strength to these suspicions, for this is not a country with so many outlets to it that a man could escape observation when getting away. Mr. Brown says that no cause for his absconding is known, and that the existence of very low dens in that vicinity lead to the belief which many entertain that murder could be done in connection with them.

Last Thursday's Statesman says: "Sheriff Scott went up the road this morning after Morris Graves, who stole J. H. Cooley's horse at Gervais a week ago to-day. On being advised of the act, Sheriff Scott immediately telegraphed to the Sheriffs of Benton, Linn and Lane counties to watch for Graves, and yesterday was notified that he had been arrested at Eugene. Sheriff Poindexter of that place started down with the prisoner this morning and was met by Capt. Scott on the up train, who took Graves in charge and brought him [illegible], where he [illegible] an examination and [illegible] await the action of the Grand Jury. After stealing the horse Graves came to Salem and stopped the first night, and then went to Corvallis, where he stayed three or four days and traded the horse for another which he rode to Eugene City. Mr. Cooley left here for Corvallis this afternoon to get his horse."

THE UTAH TROUBLE.

The situation of affairs in Utah is anomalous We can look over the mountains to our Territorial neighbors and see what can be done by a people who organize for mischief under the influence of religious superstition It would seem that all that is necessary for any band of law breakers to do in order to escape the consequences of their crimes is to preach the righteousness of those crimes on Sunday from their pulpits This is enough to invest the entire transaction with the sacredness of religious worship and entitle it to protection instead of punishment What would be a felony if committed by one person is merely a peculiar mode of worship when done by another person Who can suppose for a moment that any other community could have perpetrated all the outrages upon civilization and upon the laws of the United States which have been perpetrated by the people of Utah and could still stand in open defiance of the power of the Government? What other people could daily commit all the crimes from petty theft to polygamy and even murder, and that under the sanction of those highest in actual local authority without bringing upon themselves the whole power of the General Government, if necessary, to compel submission? But the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof and these Latter Day Saints are his chosen agents to gather in that fullness and garner it up in the Lord's storehouses of which Brigham Young is the principal keeper Therefore they go forth to pluck and plunder and slay the gentiles who do not choose to recognize their authority as the Lord's harvesters. From the Danites—organized murderers—who take charge of such jobs as the Mountain Meadow massacre, down to the petty thieves and pickpockets, all appear to be in perfect accord And whenever by some untoward circumstance they are driven into a corner, or embarrassed in the execution of their nefarious enterprises, the Territorial Legislature comes to the rescue, and passes whatever acts the emergency seems to call for, regardless of the question whether or not such acts are in harmony with the organic law of the Territory This is not just as it should be, it is true, in fact, it is a bad state of things, but then it is only a way these people have of worshipping God, and certainly everybody has the right in free America to "worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience" This is the very corner stone of our free institutions, and to remove it would bring the entire structure in ruins about our heads. These people must be let alone so long as they murder and rob and swear falsely, and set the laws of marriage at defiance simply as acts of religious duty!

It is about time this shallow sham of religious toleration were ended Suppose a Hindoo mother coming to these shores should conclude to feed the sacred crows of the Wallamet on the flesh of her little girl baby as an act of religious devotion, would she be allowed to do so? Why not? Is it worse to feed crows on girl babies than to feed coyotes on whole caravans of immigrants? Is it worse than to spill the blood of peaceable citizens on the streets of a city? Those who tolerate this should not be shocked by that

It is the existence of just such a state of affairs as this, that has at last brought about an open rupture between Governor Woods and the Legislature of Utah The Governor has always insisted upon the enforcement of the laws in that Territory the same as in other Territories But every attempt at their enforcement has been thwarted The officers of the law, Marshal, Attorney-General Librarian, Territorial Auditor—in fact, all the administrative officers—are chosen by the Legislature, by methods wholly at variance with the organic act the juries are selected in such irregular manner that their acts are held by the Courts to be illegal and void So the administration of justice is rendered impossible and crimes can be committed with the most perfect impunity This has been the case for years, and yet no remedy has been provided by Congress, or the remedies provided have not been applied by the National Executive It is not desirable to precipitate an actual conflict with the Mormons Peace is to be preferred by all means, but there is something due to the majesty of this Government, and there is much due to the citizens of the United States who choose to go into Utah, and do not choose to become parties to the crimes that have made Utah a shame to our whole country Governor Woods will merit the plaudits of the entire American people if he persists in his demand for a better enforcement of the laws—peaceably if possible, forcibly if necessary—till the barbarism that prevails in Utah under the false name of religion and is protected by false sentiments on the subject of religious toleration, shall be destroyed root and branch

WE ARE NOT A WITNESS

Our readers were not more surprised than we at seeing in yesterday morning's OREGONIAN an article entitled A Chapter in Oregon History purporting to be the reproduction of a Portland correspondence to the New York World wherein reference was made to a certain corrupt contract between Attorney General Williams and John Meldrum in connection with the letting of surveying contracts in this State We were surprised at the appearance of this article which had been slipped by some one and sent to the compositors without our knowledge we were mortified as well as surprised because the article contained a statement that should never have gone without comment through the OREGONIAN That statement is that George H Durham Prosecuting Attorney in this District, Benton Killin Attorney at Law and W L Hill editor of the OREGONIAN have all seen this contract —that is, the contract between Williams and Meldrum W L Hill editor of the OREGONIAN, never saw any such contract, never had any personal knowledge of the transaction alluded to, and never authorized any reference to him in connection with the charge arising out of it and it is but justice to Judge Williams to say so whatever may be our view of his course in other matters We do not pretend to speak for the other gentlemen mentioned but when we are named as a witness to substantiate this charge against Judge Williams we can not consent to let the matter pass unchallenged

Another blunder of this correspondent unimportant in itself but showing something as to his general accuracy is his speaking of D P Thompson of Oregon City as a brother in law to Judge Williams

It seems a pity that some men who possess the courage to write the truth cannot have the sense of justice to confine themselves to the truth

As the Tichborne trial approaches an end English papers begin to compute the probable cost of the prosecution We have some of their figures before us The lowest estimate puts the total at five hundred thousand pounds Some of the items of expense are given Mr Hawkins (leading counsel for the crown) received a retainer of £1 000 on his brief and during the trial he has received a daily refresher of £50 Serjeant Parry received a retaining fee of £750 and a daily refresher of £50 Three junior counsel received each retainers of £300 and refreshers of £10 The witnesses number 150 They are kept in court during the progress of the trial and some of them have come from the ends of the earth to give their evidence Several witnesses were paid £1 000 before they could be persuaded to leave their homes Perhaps the most remarkable feature in the whole case is that before the present prosecution for perjury was commenced the crown agreed to pay all expenses incurred in getting the claimant's witnesses These amount to thousands of pounds

The New York Evening Post a leading Republican paper edited by William Cullen Bryant says it is admitted by shrewd observers that the old political parties are passing rapidly into superannuation The Philadelphia Press (Col. John W Forney) adds The year 1874 will be revolutionary in more senses than one and we shall not be at all surprised if it revolutionizes Congress New issues call for new men and new combinations for new candidates So far as Pennsylvania is concerned it is about time that her reserve should be called to the front—her thousands of young ambitious and independent Republicans and Democrats too long kept in the background

The Boston correspondent of the Sacramento Union in his literary gossip says that Little, Brown & Co, will during February issue two elegant volumes on The Birds of North America which will treat chiefly of the ornithology of the Pacific coast Concerning Boston publishing houses, it is said that the failure of the old house of Gould & Lincoln created much surprise and that Shepard Gill & Co will dissolve partnership in March Gill retiring Charles Francis Adams is busily engaged on a historical work but no hint of its nature has been made public His son, Henry Brooks Adams has taken editorial control of the North American Review

John T Harper the defaulting Collector of Internal Revenue who left Springfield Illinois between two days recently, has returned from his wanderings as we are informed by the Chicago Tribune Negotiations have been in progress for several months and the light fingered Collector has been promised a full pardon on the condition that he make a clean breast of his thievings It is said that his confession will involve several parties who profited largely by the defalcation Harper of course is an injured man and his friends confidently expect that his reminiscences of his stealings will duly vindicate him Thus we guide

Popular elections in England are certainly models for popular elections all over the world Only a general riot and the loss of a few lives in each of several places and the sum total of disorders is told It is to be hoped America will learn a lesson from these scenes and will have sufficient enterprise to keep pace with the progress of the age In our own semi barbarous country elections are entirely too tame to be enjoyable Let us by all means imitate the mother country in this as some insist upon doing in all other matters and make a general riot of our general elections

Ex Senator Doolittle has been elected President of the University of Chicago In answer to the letter notifying him thereof he says that he has lived at Racine Wis for years and he has no intention of removing thence His legal business so occupies his time that he can give but one evening and one morning of each week to the duties of the Presidency As to instruction, says Mr Doolittle, it is understood that most competent professors are provided and no service can be expected of him in that direction With these reservations he accepts the position

Two gallants of Jamestown Indiana recently agreed to settle their rival claims to a young lady's affections by an appeal to arms The affair was arranged according to the strictest requirements of the code McClain missed on the first fire Briggs who seems to have been terribly in earnest advanced and with great deliberation put a ball through McClain's neck To make a certainty of the affair he followed this up with two other shots mortally wounding his antagonist Briggs held in $5 000 bail

A Washington correspondent writes that three weeks will be required for transcribing the short hand notes of the Durell investigating committee Notwithstanding the repeated declarations of Judge Durell's friends it is a fact that his resignation has been forwarded to the Attorney General and it is now in the hands of the President Durell has studied the situation and has made himself aware of the disposition of the Senate to reach for his hair

Referring from the editorial chair of the Milwaukee Wis Sentinel Mr A M Thompson says that a majority of the stock of the paper has been purchased in the interest of Senator Matt Carpenter and that the paper will be managed by his political friends Mr Carpenter's law partner is President of the Publishing Company Thompson's valedictory appears in the Milwaukee News the managers of the Sentinel having refused to give it place in that paper

The Boston Transcript [illegible] thinks that at some of Simon Cameron's letters written in the early days of the rebellion should now be published it [illegible] would not be [illegible] Perhaps it would [illegible] necessary to go back as far as that Webster [illegible] Simon Cameron sent a letter to Congress last year

At a recent meeting the Pennsylvania Board of State Centennial Supervisors adopted a resolution recommending that the Centennial Commission and Board of Finance contract for the erection of the Exposition building as soon as possible The edifice is to cost one and a half millions

THE PERIODICALS

The Galaxy for February opens with a splendid paper from the pen of General Custar under the caption Life on the Plains Richard Grant White contributes number three of his Linguistic and Literary Notes and [illegible] and is pungent as ever And throughout the table of contents is more than usually attractive

The Atlantic Monthly offers no exception in content in this number Robert Dale Owen Lucy Larcom John G Whittier Charles Dudley Warner and Oliver Wendell Holmes form a galaxy of literary stars that could not fail to shed luster on any magazine These with many other writers of acknowledged standing furnish articles for the February number of the Atlantic

The leading article in the Overland Monthly for February is The Indian Committee of 1866 by General W T Sherman It is one of the best magazine papers we have read lately and is worth the price of the Overland for a year But this paper is by no means the only attraction of the February number

Boys and girls of all ages from five to seventy years are delighted with St Nicholas It is the best by fifty per cent of all the juvenile monthlies and its racy reading as well as its elegant engravings are scarcely less interesting to the old than to the young

CITY.

A Minister Suspended —In the Advocate of Thursday we observed the following paragraph We learn that for a couple of days past Rev J F DeVore of the Methodist Episcopal Church has been on trial before the Church for having appended a false certificate to a bill for labor performed on behalf of the Church and for some pecuniary irregularities in connection with the Advocate agency The first part of the above paragraph is correct but the second is not It is true that the Rev J F DeVore has been arraigned before an ecclesiastical tribunal consisting of the presiding elder of this district and five elders of the Church on several grave charges The sum of his offending is [illegible] to have been certain transactions in connection with [illegible] E C Kemble in the adjustment of difficulties at the Neah Bay Indian Reservation These charges are contained in twelve separate specifications and embody those of [illegible] under making false returns as to the number of days employed in performing certain labor for the Church and Government and for circulating falsehoods Three of these specifications have been sustained and proven beyond question The other specifications are comparatively of small moment and relate principally to improper and indiscreet actions as a minister of the Gospel None of the charges involve any irregularities with the Advocate concern and are of a nature foreign to any relations with that establishment These charges were preferred recently against the gentleman in question and he arraigned before a proper court of investigation and examined in accordance with the rules of the M E Church The case has been in progress several days in this city Mr De Vore was defended by J F Caples and the Church represented by H Y Thompson Esq Each specification was taken up in detail and carefully examined At the close of the investigation the verdict of the Ecclesiastical Court was that the Rev J F De Vore be suspended from all church relation until the convening of the Annual Conference, at which time the charges and specifications will go before that body, when the action of the present tribunal will be ratified, and the accused person expelled from the exalted ministerial position he has so long occupied or be honorably acquitted, and reinstated to his high office and the confidence of his brother members and the church at large

New Custom House.—Yesterday we paid an inspecting visit to the new Custom House and were surprised to observe the rapidity with which the work is being crowded forward, especially when the present season of the year is considered and also of the state of the weather A number of carpenters are engaged in preparing lumber for the stairs, partitions ceiling etc, which will be put in its proper place on the opening of spring. All the wood work used on the interior of the building will be the best ash lumber which can be procured plasterers have not yet begun to coat the interior of this structure. That portion of the work will be deferred until next spring and summer so that the most dry favorable weather of the season can be obtained A number of masons are engaged in building a furnace in the basement, for the large boiler received a short time ago, to be used in heating the whole structure Mr Lyon, a gentleman from Baltimore arrived on the last steamer and will superintend the work of putting up the boiler, heating apparatus pipes, etc. He estimates that this portion of the work can be completed within six weeks Neither heated air nor steam will be used in warming the building, but hot water which will be driven all through pipes that ramify each apartment from basement to attic When finished there will be no building on the coast which can boast of more perfect complete facilities for heating than the new Custom House Sufficient slate stone has been received to form the roof which is stored away for the present It was the intention of the Superintendent of Construction to have completed the roof last fall, but the slate did not arrive in time To protect the building from exposure during the present winter a temporary roof of shingles was placed on Next spring this will be torn off and the beautiful and enduring slate roof substituted Precautions against fire have been taken by having a large iron pipe to pass up through the building and terminating on the roof with a hose By this means water in great abundance can be obtained and distributed on the roof or to any part of the building

Burglars About —Mrs Leon Vial who resides near the corner of Washington and Sixth streets was badly frightened on Thursday evening about half past nine o'clock, by a burglar who attempted to enter the house during the absence of her husband Footsteps were heard on the porch and she supposing it to be her husband, took the lamp and started to open the door One corner of the glass in the door was broken and the lady observed to her dismay some person, insinuating his hand through the hole evidently to reach the door knob She was terribly frightened and uttered a loud scream whereupon the thief betook himself to instantaneous flight and made his escape in the dark

Perplexing Questions —"Relations of Science and Christianity" is announced as the next subject in the series of Lectures which Dr. A L Lindsley is so successfully prosecuting in his church corner of Third and Washington streets on Sunday evenings Those who have heard his lecture on Doubt will have the opportunity to hear the views expressed in that, applied to scientific problems

Science and Christianity are sometimes presented as antagonists It must be gratifying to the public to hear an advocate of both display their harmonies

COAST AND RIVER IMPROVEMENTS

Last fall the snag puller which has been employed to such good purpose along the upper Willamet in the removal of logs snags and other obstructions besetting the channel was brought down through the Locks and is below the city Next spring operations will doubtless be resumed

Ever since the closing of navigation on the Upper and Lower Columbia by the freezing up the improvement of the channel between this city and Astoria has been suspended The dredger is still tied up below the city At present the water is too deep to enable operations to be resumed to advantage While inactive some repairs are being made to the machinery of the dredger

Under the superintendency of Capt Ran[illegible] the work of improving the channel of the Upper Columbia is being pushed vigorously Should the stage of water continue favorable and the interruption of navigation by the O S N Co does not necessitate the removal of the barges from the channel and thus put an end to operation all the work contemplated in the contract with Mr Montgomery will be completed by or before the first of March

Official notice of the completion of the new fog signal at New Dungeness was forwarded to Washington some time since This intelligence was telegraphed and a letter containing additional required information as to the manner of sounding the whistle the number of blasts the space of time intervening etc was forwarded by mail There is a bountiful supply of water and everything is in perfect condition The only thing which prevents the whistle from giving forth its note of warning is the non arrival of the usual Notice to Mariners which is expected to reach here in a few days The original intention was to have the signal in operation by the first of the present month but unavoidable delays prevented

On Monday next Gen Michler accompanied by the Superintendent and Chief Engineer of this District will start up the Wallamet river The object of the visit will be to ascend to the highest navigable point, and examine the character of the channel with a view to future operations Before their return the Yamhill river will also be examined by Gen Michler in order to enable him to make recommendations for appropriations advisedly for the improvement of the channel On his return to this city Gen Michler will proceed up the Columbia for the purpose of personally inspecting the character and extent of the improvements now being made by J B Montgomery He will then return to Portland after which he will proceed down to the mouth of the Columbia As previously stated Gen Michler will inspect the fortifications at Fort Stevens survey the route for a road which is to lead to the new lighthouse at Point Adams prepare drafts, etc and also examine the channel at various points along the lower Columbia Gen Michler has had this somewhat protracted tour of inspection in contemplation for some time but has been detained by the inclemency of the weather It is his intention to start next Monday rain or shine

Circulars were received a few days since from Washington by Gen Michler directing him to have all repairs—whether those held in contemplation or actually being made—suspended until further instruction The circular is intended to apply to this entire District and includes coast and river improvements It was stated that the appropriation for repairs in this District is well nigh exhausted Laws making appropriations for coast and river improvement never are available unless specific provisions are embodied in the bill, until the commencement of the fiscal year, following their passage That being the case and the appropriation made by Congress last year and set apart specially for the repair of lighthouses fog signals, etc in this District being almost exhausted, and the funds for the present season not being available until the commencement of the fiscal year—the 1st of next July—the Department deemed it proper to issue such instructions as are contained in the circular In compliance with these instructions Gen Michler has directed the Superintendent of Repairs Mr Plympton who is at present over on the Sound, to suspend further operations No more repairs will be made in the District until next July or later Of course the instructions from Washington are not to be literally construed as strictly prohibiting any and all repairs Only such repairs will be made as are absolutely necessary to prevent permanent damage to the lighthouse structure or remedy any serious defect to the apparatus or improve the quality of the light furnished, which if neglected might involve the safety of mariners and endanger commerce

FAR APART

Beneath the quaint old bridge you hear
The waves make music as they pass
And winding to the elm tree near
You see the pathway through the grass
Where we were wont to walk alas

The river wanders as of old
Beneath the shade of willow trees
Its mist waters gleam like gold
And ripple to the gentle breeze
But I am far from thee and these

The sky bends over broad and blue
And in the soft and mellow light,
You tread the lane our footsteps knew
In former days when days were bright
Do these days bring such sweet delight

And still that lane with grass is green
With fragrant flowers the banks are fair
In golden gloss and silver sheen
The bees still haunt the balmy air
But you will fail to find me there

Again perchance I may not see
The rustling rows of willow trees
(Which lent a leafy canopy
When we strolled underneath at ease
For I am far from thee and these

Our joys forsake us Soon does Spring
Pass by and for the Summer call
Soon do the birds lose heart to sing
When fading leaves in Autumn fall
And Winter is the end of all

A LITTLE CLUB AFFAIR

Isabel walked the parlor of her suite It was far past midnight and the great hotel was nearly silent Up and down with a supple leonine motion peculiar to her, and a footfall of velvet, turning her black eyes restlessly and whirling about in the air stirred in the passage, thus she had moved for hours

Was she a heroine in distress? Was she a woman of gifts, evolving some creation from her sleepless brain? I am sorry to bring her down to earth—she was a fit subject for romance But it must be confessed Isabel was only waiting for her husband who was out late Had she been a sensible, practical woman she had wrapped the drapery of her couch round her and laid down to sweet dreams long ago But she has only been a wife a year Her husband was her single tie, she lived her life in him.

Isabel was beautiful. Her flesh was like marble lighted by fire, her hands her eyes, her lips, the poise of her head her undulating motion, had an elegance of their own But when God lent her the gift of loveliness, He added there the gift of supersensitiveness, through which so many are graded to melancholy and madness She had been the ward of a bachelor uncle who felt he did his whole duty if he visited her twice a year at her convent and answered her sorrowful black eyes with nods and winks of approval. When she was ready to enter the world the charge of a young lady niece so taxed his freedom and in consequence, his spirits, that he laid him down and died. He hadn't meddled in matrimony Why should his autumnal youth be spoiled by a foster daughter? The problem shovelled him into the grave.

Then Burnham appeared to Isabel His family and hers had been on friendly terms whole generations He had just returned from a long tour and had the air of other continents around him which fascinated her senses Afterwards his best grew upon her, his generous nature his pure intention, his mellow thought the whole fine structure of his manhood She knew little of the world, she made him her standard So that when Burnham came wooing and made her sure that all his happiness was in her, she staked herself, and was blessed in proportion to her intense sensibility

When Isabel became a wife she did not degrade her hero. Her very estimate kept him up to her Proud and tender of her he walked to rectitude, and softly, before her, many moons and never meant to deviate

But —

(The chapter recording Solomon's falls begins with but)

Mr Burnham was a society man, he had [illegible] friends, who formed such a jovial and select club The "Pickwick Club" ran over with money and leisure and graceful [illegible] To be a Pickwickian, was to be recognized as a tip-top globule of the city cream Youngsters of family looked forward to [illegible] into this club much as the young Roman anticipated the toga of manhood It wielded an absurdly strong influence The Pickwickians met in elegant departments [illegible] imported wine, attended by perfect and [illegible] service, and railed at the hard-worked and jaded world Young husbands were considered great conquests among them, and [illegible] importuned Burnham so much to join [illegible] that he good-naturedly took to "running [illegible] from taking a friendly cigar and glass, [illegible] went on to extending his stays till the [illegible] of the club ran through all his veins

Isabel knew nothing of clubs. She supposed they might be assemblages of gentlemen with something of a literary character, such as Addison pictures She waited for her husband because she was restless when he was away [illegible] because she had any righteous tongue in [illegible] for him

[illegible] feet shuffled in the hall She bent her neck, her whole body crouched to listen They [illegible] nearer zig zagging, they paused at her [illegible] and the being outside, evidently an animal without hands, began to rub and fum[illegible] and growl for entrance.

Isabel threw the door open when a person in [illegible] bad hat, with his whole apparel somewhat on one side fell at her feet It was a [illegible] scene, but terribly real with one actor Isabel started back, raising and wringing her hand and starting at her husband like a maniac. Mr Burnham gathered himself up and took observations Some drunken men are abusive others maudlin, others jolly But Burnham was pompous He found a sofa and mounted it strenuously to harangue his wife on her duty as genl'men to c'nduct self like genl'men—drive dull care way! and made as consummate and disgusting a fool of himself as it is possible for a man's body to do when that fine spirit which governs is drowned.

Isabel stood watching without moving a muscle The stare drew his attention, and he requested leave to ask if she was drunk, and if she meant to 'sult him?' Then, over wrought by his own eloquence, he relaxed and dropped along the sofa. She saw a face swollen, and sensual, a frame nerveless and heavy, a man turned to a beast

Her maid tapped at an inner door to ask if Mrs Burnham wanted her now

Go to my dressing room replied Isabel towering between the damsel's eyes and that locomotive-laboring-up-a-steep-grade upon the sofa "Wait for me there."

She closed the door and went back Not being addicted to harangues and handkerchiefs, she merely closed her hands and looked at him, thinking, I suppose, that no woe like hers had ever come upon the world since the deluge. Yet Mrs. Smith, down by the wharves, could have shown her deeper depths and thousands of wretches within a few square miles, might have smiled at her butterfly misery Yet, after all, every one suffers according to his capacity rather than according to stroke Isabel considered wine as belonging to gentle breeding That Mrs Smith's "man" should come to the gutter through rum, was a thing to be expected", 'that sort of people you know, etc but that Mrs Burnham's lord could be touched with the same infirmity was a revelation of human nature for which she was not prepared Like all natures of her cast she stood in fiercest judgment over what she loved best.

Burnham slept till a late sun thrust bright daggers through his hair and heated his eyelids.

Dissipation treated him kindly He came down to luncheon after bath and toilet and a little philosophy as fresh and suave as your father confessor Isabel did not trouble him for the time She had taken her maid and gone out he supposed and he was glad of having more time to recover himself before he attempted to pass muster under those black eyes again He came home to dinner invigorated by business with his winning repentant guise on his arm ready for use as you may say But Isabel had not returned No one had seen her that day

He rushed to her room, and plowed among her belongings She had taken little, and that little had evidently been packed hastily

Pinned to a frame containing his portrait, Burnham found her last testament He opened it with a face like the dead She said to him "Do not search for me We can never be anything to each other again You have killed me you taught me to lean on and adore the best of men, and then you unmasked and showed me what you were The world is black I have no faith in anything

Mr Burnham, in reading this scrap forgot the repose of good breeding He fell upon his knees as if Hercules had planted a blow between his eyes he rung for the police and whirled up the great hotel like a madman. But those much battered gentlemen with clubs and ornamental caps have a soothing effect on the most harrowed mind Burnham dropped down in his parlor with his head between his hands and explained himself in fragments to one of them who stood reading him like a book

"Did she have money?" asked the innovable

She has a large bank account her own property which I never touch Perhaps she has cashed that

On investigation it was found that she had

And [illegible] the man [illegible] she'll [illegible] from the [illegible] Description of lady and lady's woman sir

So they [illegible] wires, and flew about surely and [illegible] While Burnham measured his rooms or the streets or sent police stations, looking like an old man

Once when a juvenile I seized a stone, with an impulse of disgust and hit a rat which crept from under the barn It screamed and tottered, lifting suffering eyes The poor thing had been poisoned great ulcers were on its back it was crawling from death and I hurt it I sat down on the grass crying and wringing my hand the very wretch alive I had struck a suffering defenseless creature! If I could only have gathered the rat on my lap and soothed its dying moments! But he dragged out of sight and left me to everlasting remorse Since cruelty is a two edged sword that falls back painfully if you use it even against vermin how it must cut if we have lifted it against our best beloved?

The remorse of Burnham his wanderings his remorse, his sack cloth and fastings are they not written in the book of his experience?

His police force traced Isabel out of the city but they were long discovering her They sent him continued messages of their progress he left his affairs to follow every clew And dismal hours he spent in her dressing room poring over a glove or a ribbon, enjoying the sweetness of freedom and widowhood The "Pickwick Club" was no stay to his care He hated the sight of their Bacchanalian faces

It seemed that years instead of months had passed, when the chief man of buttons and clubs waited on him one day, with the joyful assurance that in a certain Northern village, in a certain house, he would find his wife Was it joyful assurance after all? At the end of his long, sickening journey, he stood at the gate of her house about dusk, more depressed than he had ever felt before She had commanded him not to search for her he was minded to turn and go back, satisfying himself with the knowledge that all was well with her Such floods of change had rolled between them He knew not how to approach her

But, like a call to him a little cooing cry came from the house it stirred him like a sea Then Isabel came to the window looking out and up Her beautiful face was softened and sweetened, for she had been in the hard land of maternity under discipline which brings out the angel side of woman in her arms she held his little child

Her eyes falling on her husband this most consistent woman reached toward him bursting into a low, glad cry of, 'Oh I knew you'd come!

After supper, when the room was cosey, and the good maid's steps had ceased, and the blessed child had been admired till both parents were in a state of imbecility, Isabel hung to a button of her husband's coat and falteringly confessed her sins, her days of darkness, her ignorance of patient love, till the baby came to teach her

Then Burnham took up the parody, and shrived himself and made promises in a way which would have afforded the "Pickwick Club" infinite amusement And, in his turn, the remarkable infant raised his voice So that they were very cosey

And it was not fatal after all like some other Club affairs

IN MEMORIAM

DEATH OF "LITTLE BILL," BELOVED PROGENY OF REV A C McDOUGALL LATE OF CALIFORNIA.

The demise of this poor waif has cast a gloom over the entire land His notoriety was eclipsed only by that of his deeply afflicted father, whose purse is now left desolate and collapsed. Little Bill departed this life about the 13th of January 1874. His age was not definitely settled but we judge he was in his eighth year His original weight was one hundred

We shall improve the present opportunity and give a brief history of his eventful life and make these sad services as short as possible In September, 1867, Little Bill was sent by his father A C McDougall to Portland to ask the sum of $100 from our G L O G T for organizing the same

The little fellow was unceremoniously kicked out as an intruder Again in the autumn of 1868 he came blustering into the G L at Albany, conveying a savage letter from his beloved progenitor, threatening to prosecute us His claim was indefinitely postponed,

In the summer of 1872 his deeply injured sire and Rev (?) Geo B Taylor (just to give tone to the crowd you know) landed in Portland The poverty of Bill's father had become so extreme that a subscription paper was soon in circulation in Portland for his pecuniary relief We had the pleasure of seeing that wonderful document

McDougall began an attack on the Good Templars in behalf of his pet He disclaimed being Bill's father! We asked for his baptismal record We desired his real parentage and age McDougall said he was born in October 1866, and insisted on that date three times in public print, and even showed our G L certificate (seal) to prove this We mildly informed him that he (McD) was not in the State then On mature (?) reflection, however he recalled that egregious blunder in his fourth article in the OREGONIAN, Dec 22d 1873 May, 1866 ? yes that was the time! We asked for some witnesses of Little Bill's birth McD said all the Good Templars of Oregon! Averted faces was the response McDougall thought again— the members of said Grand Body May 1866 were present on that joyful occasion! Records correspondence resorted to—nothing elicited The darkness increased Once more this deeply bereaved mourner informed the excited public (Dec 22d 1873) that since he had come to think only the then G L officers witnessed this wonderful phenomenon Here was an apparent solution It was but the work of a few days to interview these grand worthies But all one stout [illegible] denial any knowledge of the event Dark suspicions of illegitimacy were entertained Some of us had thought of this for years

McD was in desperate straits. He had been forced from one statement to another till but one man of all the Good Templars remained to be heard from McD turned crimson and pale alternately It was darkly whispered that Bill's now despondent parent had taken to his cups to drown his terrible forebodings He muttered in his distress about "heart disease" slander, law, character "false witness" spiritualists etc etc

We quietly invited him to appear in public and clear up these reflections on the character of himself and child He readily (?) consented and appointed the M E Church salem and wrote to the pastor of the same that he had made such an appointment.

For three alleged reasons he failed to keep his appointment. (We beg pardon of the chief mourners for this seemingly harsh expression but our reverence for a time honored custom and our respect for the lamented dead compel us [illegible] which desolate man wrung by contending emotions which his usual remedy failed to [illegible] rushed into print for the fifth time—Jan 6th—and told us in despair that Dr B R Freeland and D C Pearson put the swaddling clothes on Little Bill A letter from D C Pearson was published in the OREGONIAN of Jan 13th 1874 disclaiming all remembrance of the affair, and now comes the saddest and sorriest event of this whole story While the printers were yet setting up that letter of Mr Pearson's we were interviewing the last man—the last one of the Good Templars of Oregon —the last member of the Grand Body —the very last one of the then Grand officers —the very last man the chief mourners wanted cross examined How shall we tell it? It takes away the last vestige of McD's claims for the legitimacy of Little Bill Oh! what a fall Oh what a crawfishing!

The reason this letter of Dr Freeland's to us has not been produced before is explained by the Doctor He says that our letter of Dec 18th, 1873 did not reach him until the 6th of January 1874 Now my dear friends give special attention to the extracts we shall read

LETTER FROM DR. B. R. FREELAND FIRST G W C T OF THE GRAND LODGE

STEILACOOM, Jan 13 1874

T H CRAWFORD—Dear Sir —I received a letter from you that was dated Dec 18th I received this letter one week ago yesterday * * * * Now, I want you to understand that I am no more of an [illegible] of McDougall's claim than you are I want you also to remember that I was perfectly conversant with every thing pertaining to the organization [illegible] with the Order up to the September session 1868 And I also know what I am saying [illegible] I also [illegible] D C Pearson [illegible] letter [illegible] private letter [illegible] [illegible] McD [illegible] form a hundred [illegible]

After the Grand Lodge adjourned in May 18[illegible] McDougall [illegible] about the secret work being divulged [illegible] Lodges McDougall was elected [illegible] Oregon and W [illegible] McD [illegible] to McDougall then as you are the Lecturer [illegible] had better go to Sheridan and get the secret work correct and then you will [illegible] [illegible] Neither I can [illegible] to this conversation and I supposed [illegible] (McD) made no note of it Neither Pearson [illegible] did any thing to burden the Grand Lodge in its infancy nor made any promise to any one to bind the Grand Lodge to any one Now as to the questions

1st— Was McDougall at the session in Oct 1867? [illegible] to my knowledge.

2— Do you recollect of any resolution or order [illegible] ever proposed at the May session 1868 or having or requesting McDougall to return to California and get the private work?

There was nothing of the kind in session

3— Did you promise him any compensation for that trip?

I did not The subject of compensation was not mentioned

I have answered all your questions They are at your disposal

Yours truly B R FREELAND

All [illegible] Little Bill [illegible] [illegible]

His death [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] the corpse [illegible]

We have [illegible] consulted with the afflicted but feel fully warranted in announcing to the [illegible] that a [illegible] will be given to all who desire to have a parting look at the [illegible] form of "Little Bill" before he is [illegible] the cold earth The funeral cortege will pass through the principal towns and villages of this State and Washington Territory [illegible] in every hotel in all the [illegible] families of [illegible] [illegible] of Little Bill [illegible] chief mourner has been [illegible] embalming material

It is rumored that the final rites of sepulture will be performed near the salmon Gas Work We hope to be more definitely informed on this point.

And now we [illegible] the last word must be spoken We shall [illegible] an appropriate hymn entitled

THE FATHER'S DRIVE

I

There's a grim one horse hearse in a jolly round trot
To the Gas Works a pauper is going, I wot etc

II

Oh! where are the mourners? Alas! there is one
He has left not a gap in the world now he's gone &c

III.

But a truce to this strain for our souls they are sad
To think that a heart in humanity clad
Should make like the brutes such a desolate end
And depart from the light without leaving a friend
Bear softly his bones over the stones
Though a pauper he's one whom McDougall yet owns

T H CRAWFORD

SALEM, January 1874

P S —Since the above was written we are happy to announce that our friend McDougall has gone into the Patent Almanac business with C I Burrows as general agent A specimen page is given in the DAILY OREGONIAN of January 29 '74 McD had a character in California some years since which was quite good according to the certificates given and he is trying to convince the people of Oregon that this is the same character that he has been showing here but we don't like these California productions we prefer home productions

The people are demanding Almanacs of our own manufacture and we shall suggest that a specimen page of the Oregon edition of McD's new work on character be given to the public We call the attention of the agent to a very important certificate from California which he may not have seen It is from a prominent minister of McD's own church [illegible] known McD a long time has had a great deal of business with him he is a high official in the red Champions of the Red Cross from which McD was expelled

FROM C V ANTHONY GRAND COMMANDER C OF R, C OF CALIFORNIA

STOCKTON Cal May 26 1873

I have been much annoyed by the conduct of A C McDougall From letters he wrote I was led to fear I had done him injustice in charging him with all the moral guilt of Taylor in the fraud practiced upon the people of Oregon and Washington Territory I wrote the correction for that reason and none other If his representations are false, the correction can injure him only It is but justice to myself however to say that had I known he intended to continue to labor for that fraudulent institution which was started with deception and continued for the hope of gain I should never have written it. I now believe he is equally guilty with Taylor in the wrong C V ANTHONY G C

Don't forget Bro Burrows to place this with those other California testimonials in your next California edition But we want that specimen page of the Oregon edition We have enough Oregon testimonials to make a volume and you are welcome to them when properly called for

Exchange on San Francisco at par

Liverpool Wheat, by mail advices from San Francisco 13s 5d@13s 9d for average California, and 13s 9d@14s for club

The aspect of the general financial situation is unchanged and with a fair supply of funds available for trade purposes business is gradually improving as the spring season draws nearer to hand and the prospect of an active season in commercial circles is certainly indicated by the present condition of affairs

Wheat Demand and Product.

From our Eastern exchanges we learn that week before last artificial matters carried the New York wheat market above that of Liverpool from circumstances connected with the fact that one million six hundred thousand bushels on the frozen canal had been sold, to arrive, both in New York and Liverpool, and the fulfillment of the contract carried up prices in New York unnaturally The receipts which have been coming into New York by rail have been astonishingly large for the season exceeding one hundred thousand bushels a day after the close of the canal Last year during the close of canal navigation the receipts at New York were about five hundred thousand bushels a month, this year they have exceeded that amount a week So the exports in the winter are likely to be much larger than last season as the foreign demand is about certain to continue if the prices are reasonable, while the West is full of wheat and the receipts at the western markets are larger than usual at this season The Boston Journal says Since the first cold snap the winter has been thoroughly mild, the northern chain of lakes being kept open later than usual At the same time that a steady export demand is looked for it is not expected that high prices will prevail the European markets have many resources and potatoes turnips etc, are cheaper and more plentiful in Great Britain this year than they have been since 1868 while they are so cheap on the Continent that they are shipped to England largely and sold at nearly nominal prices Then again the autumn and winter in England and on the Continent thus far have been unexceptional for planting wheat—the best season for five or six years—so that the best interests of producers and shippers are opposed to extra high prices

The Exports of Oregon.

We are truly sorry that our friend of the Astorian is so prejudiced against all other points except the single port of Astoria [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the commercial interests of Oregon His figures of the exports of Astoria are put in such way as to lead the reader to infer that the exports of Astoria during the month of January amounted to the large sum of $[illegible] when in fact the actual exports of Astoria would not exceed one tenth of that sum the other amounts having been shipped from Portland by Portland merchants and the ships taking their clearance papers at Astoria merely for convenience sake
